Re: REACH Certification for Containerboard
(All Grades of Manufacture)

Dear Customer:

Containerboard products such as kraft liner and corrugating medium meet the definition of "article" under European Union Regulation (EC) 1907/2006 Registration, Evaluation, Authorization and Restriction of Chemicals (REACH), and are therefore exempt from REACH pre-registration and registration requirements except for the need to register any chemical components designed and expected to be released during intended product use. As there are no such chemicals used in our suppliers' containerboard products, CSC suppliers have no registration requirements for these products and they do comply with these REACH requirements.

Our raw material linerboard and medium suppliers have also completed their respective review of the possible association of REACH Substances of Very High Concern (SVHC), as defined in Article 57 of the REACH regulation and updated on December 16, 2013, with their paper product as described above. They have found no evidence of these listed SVHCs associated with their liner and corrugating medium products as supplied to CSC. No such materials are intentionally used, and they are confident that any detection of inadvertent trace amounts of one or more SVHCs would be the result of circumstances beyond their control, such as during formulation, storage and shipment of product additives that could be used in the manufacture of these products or even as an artifact of chemical analysis. Any such presence would be significantly below and would not approach the 0.1 percent by weight threshold requiring notification or communication under REACH rules.

Very truly yours,

Tony Senzel
